

The Mail Ego

By Terrence O'Flaherty

"Recently I have noticed that kissing has almost disappeared from television—except in the commercials where it's very easy. Mistletoe is unnecessary. Any girl who wants to get kissed has to (1) use the right mouthwash; (2) shampoo her hair and toss her head; (3) lather up with the proper soap; (4) smoke a menthol cigarette; or (5) become a summer blonde. Now this is well and good but when will people begin to show the same affection in the dramas?"

Now that most television romance takes place in the bedroom instead of the living room, kissing has become almost obsolete. But there is one kiss that still turns up in most of the plots and that's The Kiss of Death. It usually happens in the first part of the show and it means curtains for the recipient—who is invariably a man. The woman who kisses too readily on TV dramas is sure to be the villain. If it happens early enough in the show, you can switch to something else. The ending is cinched!

"Our favorite TV program was the one called 'The Beatles at Shea.' All my friends watched it. We think it must have had the biggest audience of any other programs. Did it?"

No. The Beatles got their hair cut with this one. Among the top 40 network "specials" it was in 31st place. But it was in very good company—just behind Hans Christian Andersen and just ahead of "The Glass Menagerie."

"Who was the Scottish actor who played the man who didn't get the girl in 'Brigadoon'—the one who tried to escape?"

His name is Edward Villella and he is neither a Scot nor an actor. He is one of American ballet's foremost stars, which accounts for his spectacular chase scene in "Carousel." He will be the choreographer on ABC's 90-minute color production of "Carousel" with Robert Goulet to be seen May 7.

"Who were the three wonderful boys on the Hollywood Palace who played the washboard? Where can I write for musical lessons? And what's a washboard anyway?"

Ask your grandmother. It's her version of today's laundromat. The group is called "The Goodtime Washboard" and you can reach them at 2254 Wadr St., Berkeley, California. Bring your own instrument.

"What's all the fuss about Vanessa Redgrave removing part of her clothing in 'Blow-Up'? She was as scrawny as an underfed chicken. I don't blame the photographer for telling her to put her blouse on and go home. My husband was terribly upset for some reason or other."

Men have a problem these days. They want their wives to look like Vogue models when they're out in public and like Jayne Mansfield around the house. The ideal woman is one who's thin on the outside and plump underneath. Ask your husband.

"We enjoy the various beauty pageants on television but wish they would question the girls more intelligently if they have to question them at all."

The best question was the one asked the contestants on the recent Junior Miss Pageant but unfortunately they weren't on TV at the time: "What would you do if you ran a television network?" One girl thought a moment and said: "I would resign."

"In the movie 'The Great Race' there is a man who looks like the cavalry corporal on 'F Troop.' I am not referring to Tony Curtis. Who is he?"

It's the same man—Larry Storch—who is also seen in "Sex and the Single Girl" as the frustrated motorcycle cop. He and Curtis were wartime shipmates on a submarine tender but they do not look alike. Not even in Navy uniforms.
